

Unreasonable Student Complainant Conduct Procedure

1 Purpose

To establish the process for the fair and consistent management of unreasonable complainant conduct by Students.

2 Scope

This Procedure applies to all Employees involved in a Student complaint process.

3 Procedure Overview

This Procedure describes unreasonable complainant conduct by Students and appropriate responses to this conduct.

4 Procedures

Unreasonable complainant conduct is any behaviour by a Student that because of its nature or frequency, raises substantial health, safety, resource or equity issues for the Employees involved in the complaint process.

4.1 Unreasonable complainant conduct

When determining whether conduct is unreasonable, the likely impact of the conduct on other people, the merit of the issues raised in the complaint, the Student's circumstances, and proportionality should be taken into consideration.

Unreasonable complainant conduct is not limited to verbal communication but may appear in written correspondence or via digital platforms.

Table 1: Categories and examples of unreasonable complainant conduct

Category	Examples
Unsubstantiated allegations	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Making allegations about the complaint management process or allegations of, for example, bias, Discrimination, Vilification or defamation against Employees managing the complaint process, without any evidence to substantiate the allegations.

Unreasonable persistence	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Persistently refusing to accept reasonable and logical explanations or refusing to accept that further action cannot or will not be taken on a complaint • Persistently demanding a review of Decisions that have been comprehensively considered and dealt with • Inundating Employees with phone calls, visits, letters, emails (including cc'd correspondence) after repeatedly being asked not to do so • Contacting different Employees to demand an alternate outcome or a response to their complaint without presenting a valid or pressing case for one
Unreasonable demands	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Making demands about how Employees should handle their complaint, its priority status or the outcome that was or should be achieved • Insisting on outcomes that are not possible or appropriate in the circumstances, such as demanding termination of employment or prosecution, demanding an apology or compensation when there is no reasonable basis for expecting this • Repeatedly demanding services that are of a nature or scale that the University cannot provide.
Unreasonable arguments	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Arguing frequently or with extreme intensity that a particular solution is the correct one in the face of valid contrary arguments and reasonable explanations • Not supported by any evidence or are based on irrational beliefs • Failing to follow a logical sequence that the complainant is able to explain to Employees
Unreasonable actions and statements	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Abusive, derogatory, insulting or offensive communications or correspondence • Threats of aggression or harm to self or third parties

4.2 Responding to unreasonable complainant conduct

Strategies that University Employees may use to de-escalate the behaviour include:

1. remaining calm and open-minded
2. using an appropriate communication style
3. summarising the complaint and asking the complainant to confirm that all issues raised have been correctly understood
4. explaining processes and outcomes
5. separating the complainant's conduct from the complaint they have raised
6. encouraging the Student to seek support (e.g. Student Guild Advocacy Officer or Student support services))
7. seeking guidance from other colleagues or a supervisor
8. managing expectations about the complaint management process and possible outcomes.

If de-escalation strategies are ineffective, Employees may apply appropriate and proportionate informal strategies to respond to the behaviour. These may include:

1. naming the behaviour, explaining why it is a problem and asking the Student to stop the behaviour
2. setting the limit on the length of telephone calls or meetings at the beginning and keeping to the allocated time, even if items for discussion remain
3. providing a warning, if possible, that the phone call or meeting will be ended if the behaviour does not stop and then stopping the call or meeting if the behaviour continues
4. advising that an in-progress telephone call or meeting is not productive and that a call or meeting will be arranged again at another time
5. setting aside voluminous correspondence and asking the Student to summarise their Complaint in order for it to be properly considered.

Employees are responsible for keeping a record of interactions and any informal strategies applied in response to the behaviour.

4.3 Issuing a written warning

If a Student's conduct continues to be unreasonable and informal strategies have not been effective, the Student will be issued with a written warning about their conduct in the first instance.

The written warning will clearly explain why the Student's conduct is problematic and should immediately cease and will also list the relevant types of access restrictions that may be imposed if the behaviour continues.

4.3.1 Consulting with relevant Employees

In deciding on the relevant level of access restrictions that may be imposed if the behaviour continues, the Dean (Students) will consult with relevant Employees to ascertain, for example:

1. the circumstances that led to the unreasonable complainant conduct
2. the impact or likely impact of the Student's behaviour on Employees, time, resources etc.
3. the Student's responsiveness to any previous requests to stop the unreasonable conduct
4. other actions Employees have taken to manage the Student's behaviour, if any
5. any relevant personal circumstances or special needs of the Student
6. options put forward by relevant Employees for managing the situation, if any.

4.3.2 Considering applicable criteria

Following consultation with relevant Employees, the Dean (Students) will consider the following criteria:

1. the likelihood that the Student will modify their unreasonable conduct if they are given a written warning about their conduct
2. whether restricting access will be effective in managing the Student's conduct
3. whether restricting access will have an undue impact on the Student's welfare or compromise their access to study
4. whether the Student's personal circumstances have contributed to the unreasonable conduct

5. whether the Student's response or behaviour was moderately disproportionate, grossly disproportionate, or not at all disproportionate in the circumstances.

4.3.3 Decision on proposed level of restrictions

Once the Dean (Students) has considered these criteria, they will decide on the level and type of restrictions that may be imposed if the behaviour continues. These will be detailed in the written warning and provided to the Student.

This may include restricting:

1. who the Student has contact with, such as limiting interaction to a sole contact person
2. the scope or subject matter of communications that the University will consider and respond to
3. when the Student can have contact, such as limiting contact to a particular time, day or length of time, or the frequency of contact with the University
4. where the Student can have contact, such as limiting access to designated areas of the University
5. how the Student can make contact, such as via a dedicated email address.

Strategies may vary from case to case, according to the circumstances, and more than one strategy may apply at any given time.

4.4 Imposing restrictions

If a Student's unreasonable conduct continues after they have been given a written warning, the Dean (Students) will send formal notification of the University's intention to impose the restrictions to the Student's access detailed in the written warning.

The formal notification will:

1. reiterate the restrictions that will be imposed and what it means for the Student
2. provide clear and full reasons for this restriction
3. specify the duration of the restriction imposed, which normally will not exceed 12 months
4. indicate a time period for review
5. provide the name and contact details of the Employee who they can contact to discuss the formal notification

6. advise the Student that ongoing unreasonable behaviour may constitute General Misconduct and the Student may be subject to disciplinary action, in accordance with the Student General Misconduct Procedure.

4.4.1 Notifying other Employees

Where a Student is restricted from entering designated or all areas of the University's premises, the Dean (Students) must ensure all relevant Employees and service areas of the University (such as security, administration areas and the library) are notified, in accordance with relevant privacy and confidentiality obligations.

The Dean (Students) must also ensure that any restriction affecting a Student's access to Employees or University services is appropriately communicated to other relevant areas, in accordance with relevant privacy and confidentiality obligations.

4.4.2 Reviewing restrictions

The Dean (Students) will review any restrictions imposed on a Student in accordance with the timeframe stipulated in the formal notification. A review may also be undertaken following any further incidents involving the Student.

The Dean (Students) has the discretion to invite the Student to participate in the review process but should consider the possibility it may provoke further unreasonable conduct.

As part of the review, the Dean (Students) should consider:

1. the Student's compliance with the restriction
2. the effectiveness of the restriction in managing the Student's conduct
3. any information or submissions made by the Student about the restriction
4. any other information that may be relevant in the circumstances.

If the Dean (Students) decides that the restriction has been ineffective in managing the Student's unreasonable conduct, they may decide to modify the restriction, impose further restrictions or terminate access to University services altogether.

Ongoing unreasonable behaviour may constitute General Misconduct and the Student may be subject to disciplinary action, in accordance with the Student General Misconduct Procedure.

4.4.3 Notification of the outcome of a review

The Dean (Students) will advise the Student in writing of the outcome of their review. The review notification will:

1. identify the factors that have been considered during the review
2. explain the outcome of the review and the reasons for it. If the outcome of the review is to maintain or modify the restriction, the review notification will also:
 - a. indicate the nature of the new or continued restriction
 - b. state the duration of the new restriction period
 - c. provide the name and contact details of an Employee who the Student can contact to discuss the review outcome.

The Dean (Students) is responsible for ensuring all relevant Employees and areas are notified of the outcome of the review, including if the restriction has been withdrawn.

4.5 Reconsideration of a Decision to impose restrictions

Students who have their access to University services or Employees restricted are entitled to one request for reconsideration of the Decision. Requests must be made in writing to the Dean (Students) within five (5) University Business Days of the date of the formal notification unless the Student can provide reasonable justification for the delay in requesting reconsideration of the Decision.

Students must clearly outline in their request why they believe the restrictions should not be imposed and provide supporting documentation, where applicable.

This reconsideration will be undertaken by the Provost, or a senior Employee appointed by the Provost who was not involved in the original Decision to restrict the Student's access.

The Provost, or nominee, will consider:

1. the Student's submissions
2. all relevant records of the Student's previous conduct
3. whether the process adopted by the University conforms with this Procedure and any associated Policy Instruments
4. whether the principles of Procedural Fairness were evident in the process.

The Provost, or nominee, will advise the Student in writing of the outcome of the reconsideration within three (3) University Business Days of receipt of the reassessment request.

If the Student is dissatisfied with the University process, including the reconsideration process, they may seek an external review by the Queensland Ombudsman.

4.6 Record-keeping and reporting

The Dean (Students) is responsible for ensuring all associated records, including the detailed process followed, interactions with the Student and the basis of Decisions made, are sent to the Student Grievance Resolution Unit.

The Provost is responsible for coordinating reporting on the number and type of cases where this Procedure is applied, in accordance with section 4.8 of the Complaints Management Procedure.
